in this scholarly book a century's theology presented by the faculty of theology at the university of pretoria is celebrated all authors are academics or research associates of the university of pretoria a historical and futuristic overview with perspectives from the past present and future are examined the past is not only portrayed by means of societal and scientific contributions and achievements but the authors also reflect on malfunctions ill behaviour and disappointments of church and theology presented at the university of pretoria within the south african context over 100 years the book commences with a chapter in which institutional transformation is discussed as well as the changes that demonstrate the role of the faculty of theology within a secular state university it includes an explanation of the importance of research impact research productivity and research reputation among various discipline indicators the category theology and religion studies plays a significant role in the measurement of world university rankings of universities with regard to scientific and encyclopaedic content the book focuses on the theological disciplines presented in the academic curricula first the biblical sciences old and new testament studies then the historical disciplines systematic theology church history and church polity and finally the practical disciplines practical theology science of religion and missiology the role of religion studies in a newly established faculty of theology and religion not only enhances the diversity of interreligious tolerance and an atmosphere of dialogue but it serves as platform to interconnect with the fields of humanities social and natural sciences and other academic disciplines in the conclusive part of the book contributions highlight the role of the centres in the faculty centre for contextual ministry and centre for sustainable communities as well as the continental and international footprints of the two theological journals whose title ownership is attached to the faculty of theology of the university of pretoria namely hts theological studies and verbum et ecclesia the methodology comprised in all the chapters amounts to a literature and contextual study since the book describes the histories of formal academic departments these texts are of a descriptive interpretative and critical character reference is made in some chapters to exegetical methods like the historical critical methods the target audience of the book is academic scholars and theologians who specialise in the different fields of theology the humanities and other social sciences the book is also accessible to scholars of other academic disciplines outside these disciplines the book comprises original research by several authors and is not plagiarised from other scientific publications of this nature the focus of this study is on the contested early history of the mapungubwe archive held and curated at the university of pretoria the archive preserves materials of enduring historical value associated with the internationally declared site known as mapungubwe in south africa and consequently the archive forms an integral part of the university of pretoria s institutional memory this study interrogates the context as well as the many gaps in the mapungubwe archive by examining specific aspects such as the multiple narratives of mapungubwe discoveries prior to the traditionally viewed discovery in 1933 furthermore it elucidates the university of pretoria s control of the mapungubwe gold treasure trove during the maiden years of the early 1930s through the lens of the institutional instrument known as the archaeological committee 1933 1947 that was governed by the university of pretoria council who reported all progress to the state the context of the mapungubwe archive is considered in lieu of content particularly through decisions by the university that moved away from its foundations as the english transvaal university college in 1908 towards the decidedly partisan afrikaner nationalist university of pretoria in 1932 research further delves into those individuals linked with the university of pretoria archaeological committee that reported directly to the university council and the minister of the interior j h hofmeyr it is argued that the unsung hero in mapungubwe history is not necessarily the well known historian leo fouché but rather the unknown but highly influential figure of jacob de villiers roos an affluent member closely associated to influential politicians such as j c smuts and j b m hertzog smuts as a founding member of the tuc and his friend j de villiers roos played a critical financial and legal role in securing rights to mapungubwe for the university council within the milieu of the 1933 general elections and at a time when the university was attempting to buttress the ideals of national unity beyond the excavation history which is not covered in this thesis is a subaltern history lying within the mapungubwe archive that fuelled the contestation debate expounded by a committee that controlled much of mapungubwe on behalf of the university of pretoria whilst the archaeology of mapungubwe s past was of great scientific consequence to south africa it generated the controversy between the physical biological anthropologists and the cultural anthropologists including the controversy between archaeologists and anatomists whilst those same scholar s marginalised local knowledge histories this thesis later focuses on the greater ethical and moral consequence of the questions of legal title treasure trove rights of discovery and other legitimate legislative matters that required delicate manoeuvring by the university of pretoria from the onset of mapungubwe s gold discovery in addition were the changes in historical legislation overtime into heritage legislation which contribute to the debates of ownership and stewardship it is in this historical and political context that this study seeks to explore the university s perceived status and power over mapungubwe questioning how why and within which political and social settings critical decisions were made such as securing a national treasure on behalf of the union of south africa although mapungubwe s archaeological past has been researched progressively in academia over eight decades little scholarly attention has been paid to any historical interest in the mapungubwe archive by interrogating the mapungubwe archive a wealth of untapped historical sources could illuminate the origins of some controversies of mapungubwe s colonial past and how they mirror present heritage debates and disputes in forming the contemporary history and governance of the mapungubwe archive by the university of pretoria the central argument is how the mapungubwe archive needs to be questioned not only as a historical source but rather as a discourse within global trends of reading against the grain this study focuses on the conceptual notion of history as an imperfect past the underlying moral of this thesis is that research argues that mapungubwe's contested past is inherently unfinished and flawed because the past constantly challenges many ideas of the present this volume critically examines sources of evidence and material from the archive that historically have been used to tell southern africa's pre-colonial story this book recounts the british zimbabwean author's travels to cape town durban johannesburg and pretoria in south africa midway through the last decade a time of student unrest and imminent political upheaval you will be interested in this book if you enjoy narrative non-fiction writing you have an interest in personal narratives coming out of south africa and southern africa you enjoy contemporary descriptions of places including the people history and cultures thereof you enjoy anecdotal reporting which ties into a bigger narrative story you enjoy an infusion of humorous anecdote and conversation into the narrative the author draws on the experiences of his formative years the happy annual pilgrimage to his mother's family in durban layovers on the highveld with her brother mark and later the university years where his eyes were opened to the realities and complexities of his erstwhile sheltered life it begins with his return to pretoria where he spent his final university year 13 years earlier he meets an old colleague from his first university rhodes and attempts to juxtapose past and present how have things changed since then what would it take to make him go back to his studies and what does the current student unrest portend under the banners rhodesmustfall and feesmustfall he then steps back a year to when he returned to south africa from abroad to attend his brother's wedding he spends some time in a cape town backpackers and meets some intriguing inhabitants okkert and carlo carlo is in communion with the essence a mystical life force and offers to divine his future underlying his travels around south africa now in its 3rd decade of democracy are questions of identity affiliation and haunting questions from the past just who was his uncle derek of whom he was so fond who alluded to things others of his generation would never give voice to and what role did the catholic church play in the life of his late mother and what was the legacy of his catholic upbringing the last two chapters are given over to his varied adventures at ardmere guest farm at the foothills of the central drakensberg a motley assortment of characters grace the pages of this one of a kind establishment despite many of the events recorded here harking back to the last decade the author gives an honest assessment of the current state of affairs in south africa in the afterword and his take on the

the university of pretoria whilst the archaeology of mapungubwe’s past was of great scientific consequence to south africa it generated the controversy between the physical biological anthropologists and the cultural anthropologists including the controversy between archaeologists and anatomists whilst those same scholar’s marginalised local knowledge histories this thesis later focuses on the greater ethical and moral consequence of the questions of legal title treasure trove rights of discovery and other legitimate legislative matters that required delicate manoeuvring by the university of pretoria from the onset of mapungubwe’s gold discovery in addition were the changes in historical legislation overtime into heritage legislation which contribute to the debates of ownership and stewardship it is in this historical and political context that this study seeks to explore the university’s perceived status and power over mapungubwe questioning how why and within which political and social settings critical decisions were made such as securing a national treasure on behalf of the union of south africa although mapungubwe’s archaeological past has been researched progressively in academia over eight decades little scholarly attention has been paid to any historical interest in the mapungubwe archive by interrogating the mapungubwe archive a wealth of untapped historical sources could illuminate the origins of some controversies of mapungubwe’s colonial past and how they mirror present heritage debates and disputes in forming the contemporary history and governance of the mapungubwe archive by the university of pretoria the central argument is how the mapungubwe archive needs to be questioned not only as a historical source but rather as a discourse within global trends of reading against the grain this study focuses on the conceptual notion of history as an imperfect past the underlying moral of this thesis is that research argues that mapungubwe’s contested past is inherently unfinished and flawed because the past constantly challenges many ideas of the present

Interdisciplinary and Sustainability Issues in Food and Agriculture - Volume III 2010-05-24

South Africa’s border war provides a timely study of the war of words waged by retired South African defence force (SADF) generals and other veterans against critics and detractors. The book explores the impact of the border war on South African culture and society during apartheid and in the new dispensation and discusses the lasting legacy or afterlife of the war in great detail. It also offers an appraisal of the secondary literature of the border war supplemented by archival research interviews and an analysis of articles, newspaper reports, reviews, and blogs. Adopting a genuinely multidisciplinary approach that borrows from the study of history, literature, visual culture, memory, politics, and international relations, South Africa’s border war is an important volume for anyone interested in the study of war and memory or the modern history of South Africa.

historic sites memorials national parks museums we live in an age in which heritage is ever present but what does it mean to live amongst the spectral traces of the past the heterogeneous piling up of historic materials in the present how did heritage grow from the concern of a handful of enthusiasts and specialists in one part of the world to something which is considered to be universally cherished and what concepts and approaches are necessary to understanding this global obsession over the decades since the adoption of the world heritage convention various crises of definition have significantly influenced the ways in which heritage is classified perceived and managed in contemporary global societies taking an interdisciplinary approach to the many tangible and intangible things now defined as heritage this book attempts simultaneously to account for this global phenomenon and the industry which has grown up around it as well as to develop a toolkit of concepts with which it might be studied in doing so it provides a critical account of the emergence of heritage studies as an interdisciplinary field of academic study this is presented as part of a broader examination of the function of heritage in late modern societies with a particular focus on the changes which have resulted from the globalisation of heritage during the late twentieth and early twenty first centuries developing new theoretical approaches and innovative models for more dialogically democratic heritage decision making processes heritage critical approaches unravels the relationship between heritage and the experience of late modernity whilst reorienting heritage so that it might be more productively connected with other pressing social economic political and environmental issues of our time since the second world war constitutional justice has spread through much of the democratic world often it has followed in the wake of national calamity and historical evil whether fascism or communism colonialism or apartheid unsurprisingly the memory of such evils plays a prominent role in constitutional adjudication this book explores the relationship between constitutional interpretation and the memory of historical evil specifically it examines how the constitutional courts of the united states germany and south africa have grappled respectively with the legacies of slavery nazism and apartheid most courts invoke historical evil through either the parenthetical or the redemptive mode of constitutional memory the parenthetical framework views the evil era as exceptional a baleful aberration from an otherwise noble and worthy constitutional tradition parenthetical jurisprudence reaches beyond the evil era toward stable and enduring values it sees the constitutional response to evil as restorative rather than revolutionary a return to and reaffirmation of older traditions the redemptive mode by contrast is more aggressive its aim is not to resume a venerable tradition but to reverse recent ills its animating spirit is not restoration but antithesis its aim is not continuity with deeper pasts but a redemptive future stemming from a stark complete and vivid rupture this book demonstrates how across the three jurisdictions the parenthetical mode has often accompanied formalist and originalist approaches to constitutional interpretation whereas the redemptive mode has accompanied realist and purposive approaches it also shows how within the three jurisdictions the parenthetical mode of memory has consistently predominated in american constitutional jurisprudence the redemptive mode in south african jurisprudence and a hybrid parenthetical redemptive mode in german constitutional jurisprudence the real world consequences of these trends have been stark and dramatic memory matters especially in constitutional interpretation this volume returns to the Rivonia courtroom to engage with Mandela’s masterful performance when he stood before Justice de Wet in Pretoria’s Palace of Justice and delivered one of the most spectacular and liberating statements ever made from a dock cutting across a wide range of critical theories and discourses. Contributors reflect on the personal, spatial, temporal, performative and literary dimensions of that constitutive event by redefining the spaces, institutions and discourses of law. Contributors present a fresh perspective that re-sets the margins of what can be thought and said in the courtroom.
